DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1-22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 1 recites the limitations "the share" in line 8 and "the commands entered through a graphical user interface" in lines 9-10. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim. Claims 11 and 19 are rejected on similar grounds.

Claim 4 recites the limitation "the utilization" in line 3. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim. Claim 14 is rejected on similar grounds.

Claim 5 recites the limitation "the total share" in line 5. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Norris, U.S. Patent No. 5,630,148, in view of Ninomiya et al., U.S. Patent No. 5,532,935.

Regarding claim 1, Norris teaches a method comprising:

categorizing each task to be executed on the portable device [Fig. 5, step 100, col. 6, lines 50-59];

prescribing a power management policy according to a category of which each task is associated therewith; [Fig. 5, step 104, col. 6, lines 60-65] and increasing the share of the unit power supply allocated to a task running in an active window according to the commands entered through a graphical user interface [col. 6, lines 5-16, col. 7, lines 17-23].

Ninomiya teaches:

allocating a predetermined ratio of a unit power supply to a power consuming component of a computer system [col. 9, lines 28-46].

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to combine the teachings of Norris and Ninomiya by modifying Norris to allocate power as a portion of a unit power supply, as taught by Ninomiya. Both Norris and Ninomiya are concerned with controlling power in a battery-powered portable computer systems [Norris, col. 1, lines 15-20, Ninomiya, col. 1, lines 18-20]. The teachings of Ninomiya would improve the system of Norris by providing a way to allow the user to know how power allocation will translate into useable battery time [col. 1, lines 39-47].

Regarding claim 2, Ninomiya teaches that the unit power supply is obtained by dividing a total power supply amount by a total number of power supply cycles within a desired usage time [col. 9, lines 28-32].

Regarding claims 3 and 4, Ninomiya teaches designating a total number of power supply cycles within a desired usage time, calculating the total power supply amount and unit power supply, and also a periodic correction procedure interval [col. 10, lines 44-50]. Ninomiya also teaches observing the utilization of the unit power supply allocated to each task when a periodic correction procedure is reached, and redistributing the unit power supply allocated to each task based on the observation.

Regarding claim 19, Norris and Ninomiya teaches the method of claim 1, and also the portable device that implements the claimed method.
